

My prototype nanocrystals are self-assembling themselves into the ridges that used to be on flower petals! If we look closely, we can see them work!

It's these ridges that helped make the flowers bright and attractive to your kind!

Somehow we will have to get these prototype nanocrystals out into the world?!